YOUR PROBLEMS
by Ann Landers

'My Mother Has Another Man . . .'

Dear Ann Landers: I am a boy 14 who has been reading your column for three years. My father is a trucker and has to be away from home about four nights a week. I know now for sure my mother has another man in the house at night when my father is gone. A separate door leads to my mother's room and the man uses that door to come in and leave. My mother doesn't know that I know this, but I'm sure I'm right because I have seen the man in broad daylight four or five times.

The question is, should I tell my father? He has a very hot temper and I'm afraid he would just about kill my mother if he found out about this other man.

Please tell me what to do. I can't sleep nights from worrying.—SCARED

Dear Scared: Don't tell your father—tell your mother. Let's hope that when she learns her shameful behavior is causing you anxiety and sleepless nights she will straighten around. If this doesn't do it, write to me again and I'll advise you further.

Dear Ann Landers: What can I do about my husband's sister? Irene telephones my husband every night at 5:45—right in the middle of supper. He had an extension cord put on the phone. The phone sits right on the dining room table.

The children hate it, and so do I. We can never have a family discussion because we know Aunt Irene is going to use up our meal time with her nonsense and gossip. Sometimes she reads articles from the church bulletin or Bible quotations which she thinks are timely.

For years I have put up with this. I wrote to you last October and asked what to do. You said to "TELL him." Well, I told him, and here is what he told me: "Irene has been like a mother to me. I wouldn't hurt her feelings for the world."

What do I do now?
—SECOND TO SISTER

Dear Second: Don't you think 5:45 is a trifle early for supper? Why don't you change it to 6:15—AFTER Irene's call?

This change of schedule could solve the problem. It's a cinch your husband isn't going to change and neither is Irene.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a clergyman with a problem. (Continued on Page 28)
